Quick Review Checklist - for your personal review; not completed by the Graduate School

Please complete the required formatting changes outlined on the following pages. As you revise your document, use the checklist below to check for common formatting problems that can occur as you edit your document.

- Check that no text is in the margin spaces of your document. See Sections 3.2 (single sided) or 3.5 (double sided) of the Guide for more information and check your document prior to submission. Our online tutorial for single-sided documents and double-sided documents will show you how we check your margins.

- Check that your pages are properly numbered and in the correct location. See Sections 3.4 (single sided) or 3.5 (double sided) of the Guide and use the grid in Adobe Acrobat to check yourself.

- Check that your title and approval pages exactly match the text and formatting of the templates. If no changes are noted for your review, do not change these pages! See Sections 4.1 (title page), 4.2 (approval page), and Appendix A (templates) of the Guide for more information. We have Word and LaTeX templates to help you with formatting these pages. See formatting for dissertations, theses, and reports.

- Check that your all fonts are embedded. Selecting "High Quality Print" or "Press Quality" as your Acrobat conversion settings will easily embed your fonts when converting from Word to PDF.

- Include an Author Contribution Statement if your document includes collaborative work, previously published papers, papers in preparation for submission, or papers in review. (This was previously called a Preface). See Section 4.7 of the Guide for more information.

- Obtain permission or documentation that you can reprint copyrighted materials. This includes material created by others or material you have previously published. This is a requirement of US Copyright Law. Please see Section 5.3 of the Guide for more information.

- The University does not require bound copies of your document. Check if you, your family, your advisor, program, or committee requires a bound copy, and select a bindery to print your document if needed.

- The Graduate School recommends using turnitin.com to check your document for plagiarism. You can access this resource on Canvas.
